Fee: P 4,000.00

The Young Writers Workshop offers a supportive environment where young children engage in writing stories, poetry, essays, and short plays. A well-rounded program of reading, dictation, journaling, and independent writing helps young children discover what it means to be a real writer. Drama and art also extend their understanding of the written word. Basic skills (such as letter formation and spelling) are addressed in context. As children explore the role of the author, they create short stories and poems for the class anthology. The workshop will end with a culminating event: all publish anthologies; perform short plays or do readings.
